About Borneo Heart in Kuala Lumpur

Borneo Heart was initiated in Kota Kinabalu, Sabah, in 2021, and was the artist Yee I-Lann's first exhibition in her homeland of Sabah, presenting works made in collaboration with weavers, film-makers, dancers, other fellow creative producers and friends. It was not just an art exhibition, but a major celebration of the community, cultures, and knowledge of the indigenous peoples of Sabah, to whom I-Lann's recent practice is heavily indebted.

Borneo Heart turns on two concepts: the tikar (woven mat) as a collective platform for community, storytelling and ritual, and the tamu (weekly market) as a meeting place for the exchange of goods, stories and ideas. It celebrates the possibility of creating new spaces, aesthetic languages and shared ideas through conversation and collaboration.

In the same way, the Kuala Lumpur iteration of Borneo Heart is also driven by the spirit of community and horizontal knowledge-sharing. Rather than gather the exhibition in one site, Borneo Heart depends on the hospitality and collaboration of art spaces joining their 'tikars' together to make use of it for their communities. It is a sharing of different mats.

Share the Mat!

@ The Zhongshan Building

The Zhongshan Building channels the spirit of the tikar as a site for community. A place for people to gather around and chat, eat, exchange knowledge, share ideas, cook, ferment. It's a celebration of live cultures and keeping cultures alive.

The festivities begin here with a series of "fermentations", followed by a showcase of tikar artworks by Yee I-Lann, including TIKAR/MEJA at The Back Room, Seven Propaganda Posters, and a giant "karaoke mat" dedicated to the people of Zhongshan and Malaysia, with weaving by Johin Endelengau, Shahrizan bin Juin, Lili Naming and Siat Yanau.

TIKAR/MEJA

@ The Back Room

An exhibition by Yee I-Lann featuring work made with weaving by Kak Sanah, Kak Kinnohung, Kak Budi, Kak Leleng, Kak Horma, Makcik Bilung, Kak Roziah, Adik Dela, Adik Erna, Abang Boby, Adik Alini, Adik Aisha, Adik Darwisa, Adik Marsha, Adik Dayang, Adik Tasya, Adik Shima, Adik Umaira, Abang Tularan

An installation of dozens of woven mats that depict tables. The works interrogate the symbolic prestige of the table by juxtaposing its inherited colonial power against the communal character of the tikar.

ALLOM! Amatai! ALLOM!

@ A+ Works of Art

An exhibition of three photomedia essays by Yee I-Lann: Rasa Sayang, Measuring Project: Chapters 1–7, and Untitled Self-Portrait. These works narrate the Sabahan artist's journey towards the tikar (mats) of "Borneo Heart" and, in the process, her embracing of alternative value systems that challenged those of her own.

To think about measurements through the body, through life and death, is to challenge cultures of objectivity concerned with precision and quantification. These were the technologies of governance employed by colonial rulers—standardisation and administration—against which I-Lann proposes new frameworks encompassing unruly bodies organised around forms of kinship, ritual, and womanhood.

Lift the Tikar!

@ ILHAM Gallery

An exhibition of video works, woven sculpture and tikar works by Yee I-Lann which hopes to draw out ways in which the "tikar" in form and concept can act as a medium for thinking about art, power, language and how we shape society.

When I-Lann began working with groups of weavers in Keningau and in Pulau Omadal, Semporna, it was to see what they could discover from the tikar together. The collaborations themselves have been a process of weaving—of different visual languages, art histories, stories, philosophies, economies, geographies.

In the tikar, we can find a representation of an egalitarian, communal, feminist politics. It is a social architecture that is flat and modular rather than hierarchical, that is flexible, that can afford to be generous.

Balai Bikin

@ RumahLukis

Balai Bikin at Rumah Lukis tells three stories about making. First it probes into the materials, concepts, and collaborative process behind four tikar works or series in Borneo Heart – Tikar Reben, & The Tukad Kad Sequence and TIKAR/MEJA. It then traces the unfolding of Borneo Heart itself and the network of collaborators involved from the inaugural exhibition in Kota Kinabalu in 2021 to its current presentation.

Looking forward, it follows the progress of "Balai Bikin", a project by the weavers of the Pulau Omadal community and Yee I-Lann, working with Arkitek Camp, to create a community and making hall in their village, giving insights into its ideals, processes, challenges faced and hopefully its successful implementation later this year.
